Aci-Jel®
Restore

What is Vaginal Dryness?

Vaginal dryness is a very common problem which is caused by a lack of natural moisture inside the vagina.

Itching, irritation and discomfort are also very common and tend to occur as a result of long term dryness.

What causes vaginal dryness?

Vaginal dryness occurs during and after menopause but can also occur as a result of:

Childbirth

Breastfeeding

Oral
Contraceptives

Immune
Disorders

Chemotherapy

Hormone
Therapy

At times of Stress

Oestrogen helps keep the vagina moist and maintains the thickness of the vaginal lining. Vaginal dryness happens when the ovaries produce a decreased amount of oestrogen. This can occur at certain times in a woman's life, and may be permanent or temporary. Whenever oestrogen levels remain low (as they naturally do after menopause), the entire vaginal area tends to be dry both inside and out, which can lead to itching, irritation and discomfort.

Allergy and cold medications, as well as some antidepressants, can decrease the moisture in many parts of the body, including the vagina.
